Cathy Moore / Luanscot Danaan

I was born in Queensland in 1954 and grew up in different rural areas, mostly on a sugar cane farm. I left at 18 years of age and spent three years working and travelling around Australia and New Zealand. I settled in Melbourne in 1975, and commenced a long period of political activism, initially in the Women's Liberation Movement and the Left. Later I also became active as an environmentalist and a supporter of Australian Indigenous people's struggle.

Currently I have completed a Bachelor of Arts and a Law Degree and hope to get my practicing certificate next year.
